COMING TO THE THEATRES

The production of "Oliver Goldsmith" at the hands of Stuart Robson at the Columbia Theatre next week has, it is said, received more attention as regards detail han any of the many play, this wellknown comedian has given the American stage. Mr. Robson has not only supplied t complete scenic and costame investure, but he has surrounded himself with what is claimed to be a thoroughly capable supporting company. In a cast of twentyfive, prom.nence is given to John E. Henshaw, Stephen Grattan, Henry A. Weaver sr., Beaumont Smith, Jeffreys Lewis, Ellen Mortimer, Maud White, Clifford Leigh, and May Ten Broeck.

According to contemporary dramatic reviewers, "Oliver Goldsmith" has succeeded in arousing an enthusiasm that has never been evinced in prior Robsonian ctions. The management asserts that Mr. Robson has been meeting with paenomenal success, and the claim 'hat in acquiring this play he has achieved his greatest triumph would seem to be cor-

On Thursday afternoon and Saturday night Mr. Robson will revive the immortal comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer," appear-ing in his well known impersonation of Tony Lumpkin,

The National-W. H. Crane in "David Harum,"

William H. Crane will present "David Harum" at the National Theatre next week, giving an extra matinee on Tuesday, Lincoln's birthday

The great success of "David Harum" as a play is due, no doubt, in a great measure to the fact that William H. Crane is the delineator of its principal character He seems particularly well adapted for the portrayal of Harum, and he interprets the character, it is said, with rare skill.

While the play is in a great measure a picture of life in a rural place it is not by any means what the public has got to know as a "b'gosh drama." David Harum is not a rustic. He is a townsman, and there is nothing soft or unsophisticated or "easy" about bin. He is a cool, shrewd man, who does a banking business, and who might be a little deficient in education, but who is deserving of diplomas for herse sense and business acumen.

Mr. Crane is now under the management of Charles Frohman, and the latter has surrounded him with a capital ter has surrounded him with an e.aborate production of the play. The work has just concluded a stay of over four months in New York city.

The Academy-"An African King." The management of the Academy state that next week Charles E. Blaney's latest melodramatic production, "An African King" will be presented.

It is claimed that over fifty people are required to interpret the various roles of this piece, in addition to which, it is claimed a genuine tribe of African Zulus and Malay giris are carried. These people so it is said were imported to people, so it is said, were imported to this country by Mr. Blaney. It is said that ever since its first presentation. "Ar African King" has been a success, ever more so than Mr. Blaney's other attractions.

The real thriller of the pieces occurs in the fourth act, when the villain, who has been foiled in his efforts to marry the heroine, discovers her secreted with her friends in the famous Kimberley diamond mines. Upon being refused admission to the mine, he and his accomplices cut the cable, blow up the shaft, and leave the occupants of the mine in grave danger of immediate destruction by fire and water, but, of course, eventually they are rescued. but, of course, eventually they are rescued from their perilous predicament and all ends happily. The usual Tuesday, Thurs-day, and Saturday matinees will be given and the regular popular Academy price

The Lafayette-"Jim the Penman." "Jim the Penman" will be revived at the afayette during the coming week. It is society melodrama along somewhat the same lines as "The Social Highwayman," which has filled the house since last Monday. At the same time it is a play that has not been produced in Washington for several seasons, and it is sufficiently different in detail to furnish a satisfactory contrast to the present attraction.

Mr. Ormonde will be cast for the title role, his success in "The Social High-wayman" having proved his adaptability for this branch of work. Miss Haswell will be given a part more in keeping with her talents in the person of Nina Ral ston, the wife of the criminal hero. John T. Sullivan for once will be given a chance to appear on the side of law and order, for he will play the part of Captain Redwood, the detective who finally brings the Penman to justice. Mr. Rogers, on the other hand, will depart from his accustomed sphere of virtue and respectability tomed sphere of virtue and respectability, and will play the part of Baron Hartfield, the partner of Ralston. The management promises that the production will be staged with great care, and owing to the advance in stage technique during recent seasons will probably be a better presentation than was ever seen in Washington when the play was the exclusive propert of the read companies.

Chase's-Vaudeville

With comedy features predominating Mr. Chase will offer next week a polite vandeville bill of considerable excellence throughout. It is a typical Chase programme and has all the earmarks of merit and general worthiness. In a sense the bill is one of old favorites in new doings, with a goodly portion of novelties entirely

The headliners will be Walter LeRoy The headliners will be Walter LeRoy and Florence Clayton, in their latest comedy creation called "McGowan's Visit," and Miss Lillian Burkhart in Grant Stewart's fary idyl, "The Lady of the Rowan Tree." LeRoy and Clayton are credited with one of the biggest hits at Chase's this season, when a short while ago they presented "Hogan of the Hansom." Their new sketch is said to be a good when the state of the Hansom." Their new sketch is said to be a good when the said the said to be a good when the said the new sketch is said to be a good successor.

Miss Burkhart is said to be one of the most artistic comediennes of the vaudeville stage and her presence in a bill is usually a delight to her admirers. Others who will a delight to her admirers. Others who will contribute to the entertainment of Mr. Chase's patrons will be: Charley Case, "The fellow who talks about his father;" the Hawaiian Queens, in the lyric fantasie, "The Queen's Fan;" Prelie's remarkable talking dogs; the Musical Johnstons, xylophone musical artists; Lew Wells, the comedian, and Edertus, the high pyramid equilibrist.

The Bijou-"Night Owl Burlesquers." The management of the Bijou Theatr has arranged with Manager Rider, of the "New Night Owls Burlesquers," to bring them to Washington after an absence of hree years next week. Manager Coyl eels assured that it will be the banne feeis assured that it will be the banner show of the season. The company numbers over thirty people. The chorus is composed of twenty young women.

The olio is composed of American and European acts. The following are among the people: The original Newsboy's Quintette; the Four Silvins, agrobats; McCale and Carew, in a comedy sketch, entitled "An Irish Lord;" Healey and Farnham, dancers, introducing some "Singing and dancers, introducing some "Singing and lancers, Introducing some "Singing and l'alking Comedians." On Friday evening, as an added attraction, there will be a wrestling match for the champlonship ors between Tommy Conners of Mas chusetts and Frank Hueman of this ty. A purse of $100 is offered by the anagement and a side bet of $200 has been made by the contestants.
